I do not agree with wiretapping internet voice communications. There are limitless ways to talk on the internet and to force companies that produce these methods to allow a way for wiretaps to be incorporated is just silly. One may talk about something legal though private and to have the conversation on the internet whether P2P computer phone or VoIP phone, it adds a certain level of security to know that no one can hear what he is talking about. My main issue is making every company open their doors for wiretap capabilities. It is a waste of time and resources for them.
